Urban Community Change Studies (RUX)
Course Planning Sheet – 2022→

Program Goals and Sample Course Plan

The Urban Community Change (RUX) program builds students’ knowledge, skills, commitment and vision concerning community and social change, preparing them for jobs or further education in this field or in cross-sector professions that value these competencies. RUX students have the knowledge to understand justice in the urban context, the dispositions that cultivate courage for struggle, and the skills to do urban public work. The RUX undergraduate program goals are to graduate students who

I. Understand urban contexts. Students in the undergraduate RUX major know how addressing systemic injustices (racism, socioeconomic inequality, etc.) at the communal, institutional and individual levels is critical to justice in urban communities.

II. Invest in urban communities. Students in the undergraduate RUX major demonstrate a commitment to enhance their own and others’ capacities for further effective struggle regardless of objective conditions, possible current limitations, or short-term strategic outcomes.

III. Create change. Students in the undergraduate RUX major apply the principles and craft of doing strategic “public work” to specific social change endeavors, particularly in urban areas.
