“Progressive art can assist people to learn not only about the objective forces at work in the society in which they live, but also about the intensely social character of their interior lives.”

-Angela Y. Davis, Women Culture & Politics

WHY MAJOR IN WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES?

"I thought I wanted to be a teacher, but after taking the introduction to WGS I realized being a teacher was not only not the right path for me, but it wouldn't give me the ability to be the change I wish to see in the world. I was blessed... to work with professors who cared about my success. They made time... to help me academically and they made time out of their lives to help me personally. I went to graduate school and earned a Master of Science in Higher Education Counseling and Student Affairs. I'm currently the LGBT Program Coordinator at the University of Delaware."

- Rebekah Harless-Balmer

"I am so excited to be a WGST major. Being in this program and surrounded by people that are strong examples of what I want to be and that believe in me, has made such a difference in my life. I'm continuously astounded by the unique and special opportunities that are given to me in this department.... People love to give me a hard time about this major but when I start talking about the environment of learning and the strong ethics which it instills, people get quiet. I have never been in a space in which I could confidently turn to any person and always expect help or warmth or encouragement or confidence until I started in WGST classes and it is truly impossible to fail when you're in an environment like that."

- Sabina Sister

"Always having strong passions for social justice, my first year of college I picked up a Women's and Gender Studies minor. As soon as I took the intro class I was hooked. Only a semester later, Women's and Gender Studies became my major and I've never been more passionate about my schoolwork. It's hard to call it work when it's something you're so genuinely interested in and excited about. This department has given me so much in the few years that I have been a part of it. I have grown more comfortable speaking in an academic setting, extensively more knowledgeable of the world around me, and the best part is that in every class I know I'm surrounded by supportive people who are passionate about the same things I am. I feel privileged to be a part of this department."

- Hannah Collins

"The women and gender studies program at West Chester has easily been one of my favorite programs to have classes in. The professors and the students alike create an environment which motivates you to learn and grow as a student advocate for gender and racial equity. WGST classes are always my favorite classes to attend, and are the places where I feel the most comfortable on campus... We have the important and uncomfortable discussions about feminism, race, capitalism and patriarchal systems as well as receiving an education and history of those inequalities and systems. Many people after taking one gender studies class realize how serious these issues are, and opt to become majors or minors themselves. Every student on this campus would benefit from taking a few WGST courses."

- Jake Muscato

(Note: these statements are drawn from interviews with students who graduated with Women's & Gender Studies degrees.)

WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES

Undergraduate Fact Sheet

Women's and Gender Studies

The discipline of Women's and Gender Studies has its roots in the student, civil rights, LGBTQ, and women's movements of the 1960s and 70s. In its early years the field's teachers and scholars principally asked, "Where are the women?" Today that question may seem an overly simple one, but at the time few scholars considered gender as a lens of analysis, and women's voices had little representation on campus, in the curriculum, and in social life.

Today the discipline asks questions about identity, power, and privilege to contribute to health practices, education, political systems, and social policy. It draws from U.S. and international feminist scholars and activists. Women's and Gender Studies explores the conceptual claims and theoretical practices of intersectionality, which examines how categories of identity (e.g., race, class, gender, nation, age, ability, etc.) and structures of inequality are mutually constituted and must continually be understood in relationship to one another.

Women's and Gender studies provides you, as a student, with practical and integrative skills not readily available elsewhere in the University. It brings all women, men, and non-binary individuals regardless of race, into the heart of the educational process; promotes tolerance on campus; addresses issues of diversity and internationalism; and validates personal experience in academic pursuits. Its research and curricular content and methodology are multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. The only discipline in which these elements are brought together and explicitly examined, a women's and gender studies major offers you a course of study that speaks to the needs of international society and to the issues that women and other marginalized communities face in the 21st century.

Career Preparation

The Women's and Gender Studies Program provides unique skills and knowledge, and is also a complement to other curricula. Its focus on diversity leads to an integrated understanding of people and society, which will serve you well in any career you may choose. For instance, the field may assist you as a psychology major who wishes to pursue a career in counseling by demonstrating how human thoughts and behaviors are influenced by sociocultural factors like gender.

Various organizations are looking for people with expertise in gender and diversity-related issues. As a student of women's and gender studies, you can become a consultant in advertising, marketing, or research, and take up a career in personnel management. You can work in one of the thousands of women-oriented social service agencies in the United States. You can become an attorney or physician. You can work in a human relations field. This degree gives you a familiarity with the vital resources that are related to issues of gender, race, and class; these are helpful for a career in all of these areas.

Career Placement

Women's and Gender Studies graduates have owned their own businesses and entered any number of careers, including those in higher education, human resources, law, medicine, program development in NGO and non-profit organizations, psychology, and education. Graduates have found positions with Planned Parenthood, the YWCA, Crime Victims Center of Chester County, non-profit agencies that serve women, children, and families and legislative lobbying groups.

Graduates also have gone on to advanced studies in women's and gender studies and related fields at many universities including the following institutions:

Bryn Mawr College
Michigan State University
New School for Social Research
New York University
Ohio University
Portland State University
Rutgers University
Temple University
University of Delaware
University of Oregon
Temple University
West Chester University
Widener University

Undergraduate Programs

Bachelor of Arts in Women's and Gender Studies. A women's and gender studies major consists of 30 semester hours, no more than nine of which may be taken in any one academic department (excluding Women's and Gender Studies). At least five courses must be taken at the 300 or 400 level. The major allows room for those who wish to double major in women's and gender studies and another discipline. Required courses include Introduction to Women's and Gender Studies, Intellectual Roots in Western Feminisms and Feminist Theory. An internship for course credit (WOS 400) is strongly recommended.

Minor in Women's and Gender Studies. A women's and gender studies minor consists of 18 semester hours, no more than six of which can be taken in a single department (excluding Women's and Gender Studies). This program can serve as a complementary area of concentration that will enhance a number of major programs, such as the health sciences and education, and will strengthen career areas such as human services or business.

Typical Courses

Body Politics
Feminist Theory
Intellectual Roots of Western Feminism
Introduction to Women's and Gender Studies
Latina Writers
Lesbian Studies

Special Study Opportunities

The women's and gender studies department has an internship that allows you to apply in the field the theoretical framework learned in your courses. The department chair works individually with you to find a site that fits you best. Sites include Planned Parenthood, local businesses and agencies, shelters for battered women, and WCU Center for Women and Gender Equity. You may also arrange an independent study with an affiliated faculty member to conduct an in-depth study of a topic or work with them to gain research assistance.

Related Student Activities

- Gender Studies Club meets weekly on Campus
- Association for Women's Empowerment meets weekly in various places on campuses
- The Institute for Women is an independent body designed to represent the interests of women on campus. The institute sponsors a number of activities to enhance the self-esteem and career success of women: the Woman-in-Residence program, the Grace Cochran Research on Women Award, the Visiting Professor Program, and the Charlotte W. Newcombe Scholarship Grants for mature and second-career women.
- The Center for Women and Gender Equity, located in Lawrence Center, provides a lounge area, peer advising, and special interest programs, such as lectures and films as well as information on selected women's and gender issues.

About West Chester University

A comprehensive, multipurpose institution, West Chester University of Pennsylvania offers high-quality undergraduate and graduate degree programs in more than 100 subject areas, as well as certification programs. As the second largest member of the State System of Higher Education, West Chester offers a full and rewarding educational experience as well as reasonable tuition; the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania provides more than $5,000 towards the cost of each Pennsylvania student who attends. Approximately 16,000 graduate and undergraduate students, along with 1,500 faculty and staff, study and work on the picturesque, 388-acre campus. Strategically located at the center of the mid-Atlantic corridor between New York City and Washington, D.C., West Chester University is just 25 miles west of Philadelphia and 17 miles north of Wilmington.

WOMEN'S AND GENDER STUDIES DEPARTMENT

Mission Statement

For almost fifty years, Women's and Gender Studies at WCU has provided an excellent undergraduate learning environment that places an analysis of structural inequality, with a primary focus on gender inequality, at the center of the curriculum. It prepares students for careers, graduate study, and life choices through an interdisciplinary curriculum that establishes feminist values in its pedagogy and content. Women's and Gender Studies faculty are productive teacher scholars who provide leadership and scholarship for integrating gender, race, ethnicity, class, sexuality, age, nationality and disability issues into the curriculum.

Women's and Gender integrates the valuable life experiences of those people who have been traditionally neglected in academia:

- women
- people of color
- LGBTQA people
- indigenous people
- people of the global south

We continue this tradition by encouraging our students to incorporate their own voices and experiences into their studies, which helps students understand their own identities in relation to society and culture. It is through this shared understanding that sustainable social change begins, develops, and perseveres.

One way change occurs is within your engagement with others. Today, employers seek people who can effectively address diverse issues and diverse people. Many disciplines teach you about the importance of diversity. Our program will not only do this, but will also teach you the language and skills you need to create and facilitate a respectful space for all of your future clients, patients, employees, or students.

Goals:

The Women's and Gender Studies Program continues its commitment to:

1. Developing a student's ability to identify women's and feminist activities and accomplishments - especially those that have conventionally been neglected -- across a variety of cultures and historical contexts.
2. Developing a student's ability to analyze how gender operates historically and in the present.
3. Developing a student's ability to apply feminist theories, including theories of intersectionality, to personal, local, and global contexts.
4. Developing information literacy skills (locating, evaluating, and using relevant and appropriate information) related to women's and gender studies (information literacy).

National Women's Studies Association

Mission

The National Women's Studies Association leads the field of women's studies in educational and social transformation.

Established in 1977, NWSA is a professional organization dedicated to leading the field of women's studies and gender studies, as well as its teaching, learning, research, and service wherever they be found.

Members actively pursue a just world in which all persons can develop to their fullest potential - one free from ideologies, structures, or systems of privilege that oppress or exploit some for the advantage of others. In support of their work, we believe:

- Women's studies is vital to education;
- Women's studies is comparative, global, intersectional, and interdisciplinary;
- Scholarship, activism, and teaching are inseparable elements of a single whole.

WGS COURSES!

WOS100 Body Politics: Gender, Culture, and Representation

This course examines the body as a contested site of both pleasure and oppression. Considerable focus will be placed on the impact of culture on our understandings of the body, including ideas about gender, race, and sexuality. Students of all genders will be encouraged to explore how their own body image has been shaped by social norms that are simultaneously accepted and resisted. This course thereby provides an opportunity to question a variety of norms surrounding the body, including ideas about beauty, size, shape, and ability.

WOS 225 Intro to Women's & Gender Studies

An interdisciplinary course designed to enable students to analyze various kinds of statements on women, to question the implications of changing cultural patterns, and to sample first-hand efforts for change. Satisfies interdisciplinary requirement. Offered every semester. Approved diversity (J), interdisciplinary (I) and writing emphasis (W).

WOS 227 Let's Talk About Race

This course is an introduction to the study and critical discussion of race within the field of Women's and Gender Studies. In particular, students will reflect on and learn skills about effective communicating on and around matters of race, race relations, and racial justice. With resources ranging from scholars in the field to public intellectuals leading public discussions regarding race, students will be exposed to resources from a range of voices in order to hone their own skills in the discussion/understanding of systems of power and domination as they relate to race. The class primarily serves as a means to sharpen communication skills, applicable in multiple social environments. Students will learn through a Women's and Gender Studies framework that asserts that the understanding of multifaceted identities is critical in understanding the dynamics of race and gender as they relate to systems of power, governance, violence, and subjugation.

WOS 240 How To Do Things With Feminism

This course is an introduction to the study of Women's & Gender Studies as an interdisciplinary field. In particular, students will reflect on the academic, professional and community activist dimensions of the field. The course offers an overview of the development of Women's and Gender Studies within the academy and ongoing collaboration with and tensions between academic feminism and feminist activism. Students will become familiar with the methodological and theoretical tools used by feminist researchers and activists. Beyond feminist methods and theories, students will also become familiar with the professional and academic side of WGS: we will discuss the wide range of women's and gender-focused journals, professional organizations, and conferences in their sub-fields/disciplines. Finally, the class serves as a speaking workshop, as students work with the instructor and collaboratively to develop speaking skills. Students will develop a plan for, and begin to compile, a portfolio for future career, community activism, and graduate studies.

WOS 250 Women's Self-Representation

An interdisciplinary approach to ways women record their lives. Approved diversity (J) and writing emphasis (W)

WOS 276 Sexual Identity and Culture

An interdisciplinary introduction to meanings attached to human sexuality, exploring intersections between theories of sexual identity and theories of gender, class, race, ethnicity, age and nationality. Approved diversity (J), interdisciplinary (I) course.

WOS 300 Queer & Feminist Approaches to Disability

This course, first and foremost, investigates the concept of "disability" and how we may renegotiate our understanding of and relationship to it. Contemporary understandings of disability are informed not only by histories and institutions that are rooted in racism and white supremacy, these understandings, too, often manifest in ableist violence. However, Disability activist/scholars continue their tireless work of redefining, re-engaging, and claiming disability. They challenge people both in and outside of disability communities to rethink their understanding of disability, the language that reflects histories of ableism, and the power that the concept of disability has over how we shape and are shaped by notions of ability. We will explore various models of disability using a feminist and intersectional framework. We'll theorize concepts like "normal," "inspirational," "access," and consider how these concepts emerged and exist in relation to individuals and communities.

WOS 306. Think Globally, Act Locally: Transnational Feminisms for Everyone

This course explores current issues and debates relating to the gendered effects of globalization and women's political responses to it and dynamically re-conceptualizes the relationship between women and nation; between gender and globalization; and between feminist theory and practice.

Typically offered in fall.

WOS 310. Women and Activism.

Although often misrepresented or ignored, women were and continue to be active in a wide range of social justice movements. This course focuses specifically upon women activists in the United States and their resistance to structural inequalities based upon gender. In addition to social justice movements focused on sexism, this course uses intersectional theory to recognize the feminist value of women who work against racial, economic, sexual, and other oppressions.

Pre / Co requisites: WOS310 requires prerequisite of WOS225 or WOS250.

Gen Ed Attribute: Diversity Requirement, Writing Emphasis.

WOS 315 Women of the Global South

This course will examine the nature of women's lives in the Third World, focusing on topics such as family, education, health, development policies, and political change. Geographic areas studied include Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East. Offered spring semester, odd-numbered years. Approved diversity (J) and interdisciplinary course (I).

WOS 320 Independent Study

Independent research and study for upper-division students. Topic to be approved by supervising faculty member. PREREQ: WOS 225. Offered as needed. This course may be taken again for credit.

WOS 325 Special Topics in Women's Studies

Selected (and changing) topics, e.g., Black Women; Women and Work; Women and Sexuality. Offered as projected enrollments warrant. This course may be taken again for credit.

WOS/HIS 329 Gender and Peace

An examination of the ways in which social constructions of gender intersect with perceptions and the experience of peace and war. Offered some fall semesters. Approved interdisciplinary (I) course.

WOS 335 Gender and Science

Focusing on the implications for both science and society of this marginalization of women and minority scientists, the course examines not only individual scientists, but also the institutional, social, and cultural contexts of scientific work, and scientific debates on the "nature" of men and women and the "nature" of race.

WOS 350 Lesbian Studies

This course is an investigation into the meanings attached to lesbian existence. The course will examine historical, sociological, anthropological, scientific, political, and cultural constructions of lesbian existence, including the language used to frame that existence. The course will also explore the intersections of lesbian identity with other theories of identity, including theories of gender, class, race, ethnicity, age, and nationality.

WOS 399 Women of Color & Material Culture

This course is an interdisciplinary exploration of the ways that gender and race shape the histories of cultural production and material culture, aiming to problematize the historical sidelining of the contributions of women of color in global history, recognizing their deep impacts on their respective communities, on racial identity, and cultural authenticity. By centering the lived experiences and the labor of women of color, we are able to perceive of a more just and equitable world, where traditional histories have commonly elided, appropriated, or violated these contributions in historical and cultural accounts. The course will interrogate the concept of labor and production from a number of disciplinary vantage points, focusing primarily on foodways and commodity culture, all while situating women of color as the core category of analysis. Gen Ed Attribute: Diversity Requirement, Interdisciplinary Requirement..

WOS 400 Internship

This course is designed to allow students the opportunity to put into practice, outside the academic setting, the knowledge regarding women's experiences gained in other courses. Some possible sites might be a women's health clinic, a business, a newspaper, a social service agency, or an electoral campaign. There will be both an on-site and a faculty supervisor. PREREQ: WOS 225 and two other Women's and Gender Studies courses. Offered as needed. This course may be taken again for credit.

WOS 405 Feminist Theory

Designed to introduce and discuss basic questions in contemporary feminist theory, the course will explore different philosophies of feminism and include such issues as motherhood, intersections with other theories of oppression. PREREQ: WOS 225 or and WOS 305 permission of the instructor. Approved interdisciplinary (I) course.

WOS 410 Senior Colloquium

Sample topics include global feminism, mothering, the women's intellectual history, and feminist utopias. Offered as needed. PREREQ: WOS 225 and two other Women's and Gender Studies courses. This course may be taken again for credit.

WOS 415 Senior Project

Preparation of research in any area of Women's and Gender Studies, to be decided by student and adviser. Supervision includes exercises in method and bibliography. Usually, a lengthy research paper will be the final result. Offered as needed. PREREQ: WOS 225 and two other Women's and Gender Studies courses. This course may be taken again for credit.
